here, where waves wipe over you you make strange shapes with your hands I saw your ambition bleeding to Asia through the sand oh, like those messengers before you you've waited too long to claim your tongue so before you drop into your skin and drown will you remember how your father claimed his son?

though the tides wash you dry stay by me to the end, down the undertow though the darkness hides your horizon lines believe the answers you already know your eyes speak of changes our words don't describe and in your arms I feel a certain wanting, lacking
