Could it be I've created this seclusion of mine
And forgotten what this life is for
Do I hold onto what I think is rightfully mine
Blind to see that all is Yours
Building up my fears of loss and failures
When greater treasures are found in Your ways
Is this Your voice getting louder still
Is it me You're calling today
Calling today

Am I willing to stay
Or willing to go
We like to say "whatever You will O' Lord"
But does this heart even have an open door
Who I am I truly living for
Who am I truly living for
Is it my way, my thoughts, my comfort, my rights
Does the "I" become greater than I Am
The greater battle is in our hearts my friends
Is it Him we're truly living for
Is it Him we're truly living for

Could it be I've ignored the cries of your children
The tears that spoke Your call to go
Countless pictures and stories I've seen
Of people in need
What am I waiting for
Praying for a hungry desperate generation
Asking You to open others eyes to see
But is this Your voice getting louder still
Is it me you're calling today
Calling today
