"Today"

Pulling down the shades
You're comfortably lying in your bed
Wrapped in fear
You'd rather hide away
Never to feel the air again
You desperately plea
Today
I'd rather stay away
Today
Can wait another day

You remind me
Of one who painted colorful pictures with gray
Call it illogical, insensible dreaming
But dreamers have the final say

So if you find him
Please tell him that I've saved his place
On this runway
To fly in higher skies of grace
Don't worry about your wings
You'd find them if you'll only fly
All you need is to hold tightly to me

Your reflection fades
While you try to live a memory
Of yesterday
And trust became your enemy
Now you're holding hands with unbelief
Unexpectedly
Today
Has gone away
Today
Now another day
