

The Whitlams

"Where's the Enemy?"

Visit "Where's the Enemy?" on MotoLyrics.com

He thinks it's best to criticize his own kind
An animal of greed, best to sew that social seed
I thought by my thoughts all would come clear to me
Yeah I can shoot a gun, maybe I should join the army

Is there a quiet place to lie?
Maybe watch this all go by Wonder how can we survive
Wasting energy, where's the enemy?

I'd soldier on and walk the curvy line so straight
But I would fall behind, maybe I am not so blinded
You talk of so much pity that is self-related Blaming now yourself, said the fault lies somewhere else

Repeated when the feeling's high
I wish it all could just rely
On the depth of you and I
Wasting energy, where's the enemy?
Words & Music: Tim Hall
Tim Hall: vocal, guitar
Tim Freedman: piano, backing vocals
Chris Abrahams: Rhodes electric piano, Hammond organ Michael Vidale: bass
Mike Richards: drums

Visit The Whitlams page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.