She wakes up, with her hair down her heart's infected.
Her makeup's the least of her worries now. Her heart's infected, but she's already gone.

"It's worse when you're young, it's worse when you're
young you can't talk the words, they block your tongue"

"It's worse when you're young, it's worse when you're
young you can't talk the words, they block your tongue"

she don't mean what she say, she's only got one day to make it right. And I don't make the rules, but I've seen his face late at night. That's right. So I'm sorry you're dead, the sweetest face on your head and everyone I know misses your lies. We traded rings and luck things,

I wish I had mine now, and a lot of good my kisses did your dead mouth. Goodbyes are final now she swore.

So

goodbye, goodbye, goodbye to all the things you love.
