(Alex Lifeson)

He opens the book-looks at the scenes from yesterday
How they laughed and loved and lived before the grew old and gray Now

he sits alone in his room, and the clock ticks away
Together they enjoyed all life's beauty and all it's fears
The lonelycry of his soul falls only on his ears
Each page's photo marked with the stain of his tears

He didn't know what to do

He didn't know what might come

Nothing was all that was left to him

Nothing was left when she was gone

The heart has a memory so strong

It remembers every right and every wrong

On those pages of his long, lonely life

He can only see his wife

He said "Pluck out my eyes"

He said "Plug up my ears"

He said "Silence my tongue"

He said "Take away my empty years"

One last wish

To see her face

One last breath

He's calling to death

One last look up at the sun

As he picks up the gun

As he steadies the gun

As he finally aims the gun
