

Purple Deep "Blind Lord"

Visit "Blind Lord" on MotoLyrics.com

Jon plays harpsichord on this track, which is a love song, sort of squeezed into the format of a twelve bar blues. The middle section is a descending chromatic sequence which is intended to give a sort of "slowing down" effect."

I see reflections in the water

Autumn colours, summer's daughter

And as as the year is growing older

I see winter on my shoulder

I stand in the haze

Watching stormy ripples grow on my own

Never knew your needing

Till I found myself standing here alone

And in the water, such a sad face

Slowly drowning, such a sad face

If only I could change the seasons

Like a poet, I've my reasons

It started to snow in the middle of July

Wonder why

Never did understand you

My sorrow is hanging in the grey sky
In the summer days we flew to the sun
On melting wings
But the seasons changed to fast
Leave us all behind
But then the stone fell on the water
Putting end to summer's daughter
And me, I turn away remembering
All the seasons, such a sad thing
It started to rain in the middle of the sun
Winter's begun
Never did understand you
My sorrow is hanging in the grey sky
In the summer days we flew to the sun
On melting wings
But the seasons changed to fast
Leave us all behind

Visit Purple Deep page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.