Of Flight & Failure - New York In Ruins

I look into the sky my strength comes from the light
that ends the night.

These tears will wash away as fast as they came flooding through my eyes.

Ashes fill the air, I gasp for breath, a whimper's all they hear,

The city's laid to rest, the heart of man can't give into his fears.

The city waits alone for living breathing love to call it's own.

Sleeping endlessly, forgiving for what you have done
to me.

Though this will take some time we're stronger in the end.

I never thought this night would fall, I never thought I'd
see the end.

When they sky falls down, I will run to you.

Before you hit the ground, I will save you.

Just take my hand we'll be just fine, say a prayer and
we'll take flight.
