The clock's gone its own way
Discarding from everything I ever hoped for Yet so dishonest is the race we try to keep up with
Do you want everyone else to fail before you do

We were straddling the white line
Of the most trickery road that we ever have been to
Our love's outrageously surrounded
By your greedy, selfish lies

I know everything will be alright
Still I feel like we're facing the way back down
Well it strikes, intention's left your vacant smile
At least repeat my favorite end
And I'll know, I know

And every airplane we pointed at seemed
As tiny as our fingertips
I hope you'll agree with the fact
That I won't say a thing
Because I'm gasping for breath
In this cold summer night

I know everything will be alright
Gotta stretch out my arms
Because she blurs my sight
Time has laughed at us trying to overtake its way
In spite of all the days we'd thrown away to know
And I'll know, I know

I know everything will be alright
I thought we'd speed up but we fell behind
A brilliant crash was something you were preparing for
So tragic were the gaining's
Explanations are the worst to know
In this situation
