Words can only be wasted
Actions reconsidered
Seeing the spark after the flame
Makes inspiration seem bitter
Pleas should always be answered
Offers not repeated
Saying the words after the thoughts
Leaves opportunity cheated

Gilt-edged or guilt-free
I'm gilding your memory
Looking back, I see your face and
I hear what you had said
Looking back, would it have mattered if
I had not held back

Time can never be measured
Moments pass like hours
Hearing that voice louder inside
Makes better men run like cowards

Sharp-edged so brightly
I cut free so languidly
Looking back, I see your face and
I hear what you had said
Looking back, would it have mattered if
I had not held back

Fear can never be trusted
Reasons are excuses
Living that life, leaving the risk
Makes quick decisions abuses

Dull-edged and bluntly
My regret can bludgeon me
Looking back, I see your face and
I hear what you had said
Looking back, would it have mattered if
I had not held back
