In the face of grave defeat I heard cries for mercy
No barrier of self control, no innocent composure Abusing love and like a child inflicting pain upon itself
When the calling finally comes well there be no one waiting
Well there be no one waiting
Well there be no one waiting
Well there be no one waiting
Well there be no one waiting

In blind despair taken in by any glimpse of freedom Sell your soul to buy some time, infect all your longings
The thought that god has taken sides on the path to breaking down
Disconnected but not alone, scream to the tune of the background noise
Background noise
Scream to the tune of the background noise

Endless thoughts of what is wrong arrive at no conclusion
On the floor still nursing wounds no sense of self to speak of
The thought that god has taken sides on the path to
breaking down
Disconnected but not alone, scream to the tune of the
background noise
Background noise

When does 'enough' become enough?
When does 'no' have meaning?
When does 'enough' become enough?
When does 'no' have meaning?

When does 'enough' become enough?
When does 'no' have meaning?
When does 'enough' become enough?
When does 'no' have meaning?

Backgrounds noise
