You don't decide
You can't define what's good, what's not
What's wrong, what's right
You have to hide all your feelings

Having opinions can be your worst enemy
You will respond without asking

You will perform like all of them
You will behave as predicted

Being a rebel, and it's the purgatory
How did it end up so low
What about your ego
You have been robotized
It's what you eat, it's what you wear
Look around you, it's everywhere
In every action, in every move
A vague impression, having the right to choose
What about your ego
How did it end up so low

In your head, it will glow
Like a seed, it will grow
You have been robotized
You wear the freedom while a child is working
You taste a kingdom while the trees are falling
Loud voice and clear messages

The demons are so creative
There is a little matrix in everyone
