

Pale, The "Your Parents' House"

Let's not waste time with investigation.
Just let the shock set in, we've made our bed.
I'm stuck upstairs clutching car keys and waiting for something, anything to get me out the door.

What were we thinking?
I could climb the walls here and yell and scream until my voice is gone.
But I act calm and never more composed waiting for something to save the day.

When you glare and you talk and say that it will be okay...
All the way to confess I must guess that you know how
this ends.

Let's not waste time with investigation.
Just regroup before we get to your parents' house.
So you know, I was ready to see this through,
but I'm changing every single day.

When you glare and you talk and say that it will be okay...
All the way to confess I must guess that you know how
this ends.

Lulled to sleep by so much time with nothing going wrong.
Do you know your bait and switch will fool me every single time?

Everyone will know when I start to show.
They'll never look at me the same.
I'm changing my mind again.
On the drive to you, I think that I have really changed my mind...
And my plans for school and moving to the coast...
Will you tell me now that I have to disappear?

On the way to confess I must guess that you know how

this ends.

Lulled to sleep by so much time with nothing going
wrong.
I've paid no mind to my defenses.
Your bait and switch will fool me every time.
