If there's a cloud in the sky, for what you lost and said good bye, to a somber moment when,
love was lost but a new began, he'll flip a coin and call it fate

You live or die upon this day, the moment when I forgot, the pain I caused all the lot

The winter soon she forgave, that autumn wind rolls on my grave

And this summer breeze,
comes over me,
and the morning dew over my own,
just like bittersweet,
death's company,
all's feelings to this feeling of my death

If she knew,
what others known,
instead of this I'd be home

This hell is mine,
and I'll take this crown, my wrath they feel as I shake the ground

Under skin my barbed tongue, I watch humanity in self run on

And this summer breeze,
comes over me,
and the morning dew under my own,
just like bittersweet,
death's company,
all's feelings

And this summer breeze,
comes over me,
and the morning dew under my own,

all's feelings to this feeling of death

To this feeling of our death
