The winds of darness blow again ridden by the mares of night they beckon me in dreams and visions from far beyond creations light they sing to me wrathful beasts of satans fire they urge me further on my path now soaked in froth and dark desire at the threshold of the inverted womb I stand

Surrounded by darkness

Amidst it's blackened clearness there is naught to veil my sight I can behold as they ascend the malformes horrors of the night and feel the crosses turn each sense grow dim as if one with the dead and as I fall on my knees to the ground I am fed with the fumes of shallow graves

Into the starless night
I follow the stench
urged on by a thirst
that can not be quenched
into the starless night I must go the urge is so strong it's all that I know satan's hunger satan's hunger

The luring lament of a witch the psalmes of angels fallen the chanting of the undead they echo in the wind sanity and senses with the darkness now aligned like tentacles and angelwings in foulest love entwined and the graves begins to open

The brightest light will always cast the darkest shadows shadows in which the truth lies concealed for deep in the tunnels beyond the dream of this world the mysteries truly reveal

Into the starless night
I follow the stench
I follow the call urged on by a lust that eliminates all
satan's hunger. satan's hunger!
