Branches block the moon in the evening
you fall into my arms
The hum of the engine on the highway is like a monotone alarm We drive til' the morning comes and search for a field to fall upon We whistle every song we hear and the radio plays along

We drive through Portland,
along the Ocean
Where the waves crash down

We're chasing the sun
but the snow keeps falling
Will this winter ever end?
The city's asleep
but I'm still awake wondering
Will this winter ever end?

The Birds all sing along in the summer we hear them up in trees But they're nowhere to be found right now they'd be frozen in the breeze I wish I'd followed them down south where the snow it seldom falls

Instead I just feel stuck up here trapped inside of these four walls

We drive through Portland,
along the ocean

Will this winter ever end?
The city's asleep
but I'm still awake wondering
Will this winter ever end?

The spring is must be near we watch as the ground reveals itself
The sky's a sheet of white again let's get a drink and wait it out

We drive through Portland,
along the ocean

Will this winter ever end?
The city's asleep
Will this winter ever end?
