Remember when you took it all and headed on out after all them you took it all and had them you were always chasing all of them you'd find them and then you'd forget them.

If the years weren't enough to slow you down
The tears too much I might drown you were my right and left the song in my chest.

You're happy now with a place together It's right by the river, which by the way is contaminated just after the rain came to give your town
To give your her drink of water

And I thought it was somehow understood I've been calling you every night that I could I'm thinking far across the water how lucky that I am to have lost her, crossed her.

The room became quiet when you left me However I tried to turn the volume skywards Over there, you unkindly put me
