

Waylon Jennings "Mississippi Woman"

Visit "Mississippi Woman" on MotoLyrics.com

The reflections of the trees are cut by the bow of my piroque
Splattered by the paddle of my eager hand
That Mississippi woman is a wavin' over yonder Wavin' her lantern to her Louisiana man

How I love that Mississippi woman
How I love that Mississippi girl
How I love that Mississippi woman
But her heart did not belong to me

The reflections of the trees are cut by the bow of my
piroque
Splattered by the paddle of my eager hand
The silence from behind me is alive with the splashing alligators
And the lantern light is blinking on the bottom in the sand

How I love that Mississippi woman
How I love that Mississippi girl
How I love that Mississippi woman
But her heart did not belong to me

Visit Waylon Jennings page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.