Take me down to your rivers on the weekend
Drop in the waters, 'til I'm swimming in your love
Without a sound, I slipped into your evening
Breathe me in; I'm the coolness in your air

You only call my name when you feel your body weaken
My mind tells me, you got much more to spare

Deciding
To keep hiding
And I don't mind it
If you walk through me

I taste the air in the temple of our familiar
Where once we possessed the secret of joy
Bastard emotions are pearls that dropped into the sea
Embraced by the gifts of the past, leaves me wanting more

Out of sight, I slipped into your daylight
Tease me with your sense of optimism

Denying
You'll be relying
And I don't mind it
If you walk through me

Dare to tread the path to an unknown tomorrow
Bravery seeks a place among our sorrows
Stand up and be counted with the wreckage of the night that follows
A requiem of words is hard to swallow

Deciding
To keep hiding
And I don't mind it
If you walk through me

Denying
You'll be relying
And I don't mind it

If you walk through me
