Redeem yourself-

female: To have my hand you must slay the beast female: slay the beast and return to me female: with its head in your hands narrator: an evil darkness sets upon the land narrator: the hand of god no helping hand narrator: in the village lives a wise old crone narrator: with her wisdom he'll have this done

Speak no Silence-narrator: To slay the beast if that's what you'd do, narrator: look not into its eyes nor see narrator: its face when you return narrator: ask it no questions and hear no words narrator: make strong your shield and sharp your sword narrator: in the hills lives the dreaded beast narrator: thou shalt slay the evil beast

Be quiet mind-male: But why should I not look at the beast male: the evil beast cannot harm me male: my shield's strong, my blade's true male: and deaf, I can fear no hideous roar male: this beast's head shall adorn my sword male: ah, but here lives the evil beast male: I shall slay this evil beast

You meet the beast-female: My love my dear would you kill me?

female: and I had thought you had loved me?

female: but here you raise your sword narrator: he looks into her eyes, sees no flaw narrator: his own betrothed, there he saw male: Alas, my love, for none shall die male: but here, with me, would you lie?

And Home again-female: My love, my dear, but where's its head?

female: have you returned without it dead?

female: its head, my dear, its head?

male: what beast, my love, for there was none male: you joined me there, and there was none female: Alas, my love, for 'twas not i female: the beast therein hath tricked thine eye

No Elixer-

narrator: Wisdom failed to prevent your wounds narrator: but now your end will come too soon narrator: your sword still unadorned narrator: the beast, my friends, no more than life narrator: the evil thing your future wife narrator: alas, my friend, you'll be not mourned narrator: but at last your swords adorned
