I know you don't like "I'm sorry" 'cause once no one said it to you just like you don't like holidays and you can disappear in a room just like what family means to you it's a burn mark 40 years wide but we are all somehow deserted all somewhere left behind.

You stare too long at that package you won't get to the gift inside funny how life makes a wound and then makes it your ally hold on to me like a scar on your side like family: calloused but kind we are all somehow deserted

Real armor is it not shiny and bright it's dark and it hits back hard and love it is one long lesson in where to let down your guard

I'll go you story for story of games that hit your head on the floor your hard luck guardian heroes you don't need them so much anymore I used to think that's what muscles are for to close all the drawers and keep them that way
we're all somehow deserted
but where they leave us we don't have to stay
where they leave us
we don't have to stay.
