"You Charlatan"

Can you remember summer skies, the bluest eyes, staring at me telling lies. Did you believe yourself,
I was always wrong, you were always right
the trophy winner in every fight.

You lied you cried you charlatan,
those eyes, those eyes have never been so black,
so blue distant like you.
Am I better for it, if I just ignore it.

Can you remember-winter nights, without the fights
making out by candle light.
Didi you believe those words I said I love you so,
dont you know, but it was something you could never
show.
Someday I know I'll forget you, but for now just leave
me alone.
Someday I know I'll move past this, but for now just hang up the phone.
