He sits alone in a crowded station
And lights his cigarette
The light flickers slightly
But tells him politely
Life's not at its best

She weighs him up 'cos his love's taken lightly
And love's her only regret
'Cos love's not a sin in her eyes
She Keeps asking him why - "Why are you leaving"
"I just can't say"
"Why are you leaving"
"He don't know that he's gonna stay"

Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it

He walks home with his pride in his pocket
And pulls it out with his change
His love is something that's turned into nothing
Now isn't that strange

She holds her hands high, close to a bright sky
He's got his head in the clouds
He's not a sin in her eyes
And she's telling him why - "Why are you leaving"
"I just can't say"
"Why are you leaving"
"He don't know that he's gonna stay"

Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it

Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it

"Why are you leaving"
"I just can't say"
"Why are you leaving"
"He don't know that he's gonna stay"

Put a little light in her darkest day
So she can see it
Put a little love in her heart on the way
So she can feel it
