Politimann,
kan du si meg
hvor jeg bor?
Jeg kan
ikke
finne
veien
hjem!
Pappa heter
Far og mamma
heter Mor, Og jeg
tror jeg
bor på
nummer
fem!

Jeg har gått så
lenge, sikkert
ett minutt!
Jeg er
sulten
og jeg
heter
Per!
Mamma kaller
meg sin egen
gutt.
...
...
og så
vet jeg
ikke mer!

Submitter's comments:Â

This is a performance held by me and some my friends at a New Year party in the scientific town of Pushchino (Moscow Region). I am as the Norwegian Snow Girl who is sent to Russia on purpose: to replace the real, Russian traditional Snow Maiden who always comes together with Grandfather Frost on the New Year. The plot was in fact to ask a reindeer to find a drunk, confused Norwegian virago and bring her to participate in the Russian New Year feast instead of the original character who had actually fled away from her strict grandpa to stay with her boyfriend - Woodwose.))))) So this Norwegian girl began to sing the song originally sung by some little lost boy who appeals to a policeman to be conducted home. But the Grandfather Frost and his friend get the point that the Snow Maiden was an intruder. And she was crying and abusing while being driven out.

P.S. The rhyme was found by me in some Norwegian childbook, and even GOOGLE has no idea who is the author. But it was me who created the arrangement and performed it; while my friend (as the reindeer) wrote the music and played it.))

Enjoy!
