As I look around, at all of God's creation the love that was given, what a fascination
The driving of the nail, it penetrates my soul
But the eyes grow weary, for this world has loss control
Life gets harder day after day children killing children, they're being lead astray
Hurting are the people, looking for an answer
It's all too clear to me, but who's gonna be the master

Where's the love, where's the peace
Stop the hatred, let the killing cease

Where's our respect, where's our manners
Lost in the years to unloved and battered
What are we teaching, this generation
How hatred and slander, can build a nation
Oh the clothes we wear, or the color of our skin
See it really doesn't matter, if we lose or we win
The message that is here, is to love if you dare
Can anyone hear me, or does anyone really care

Where's the love, where's the peace
Stop the hatred, let the killing cease
