Well, every time you smile
It takes me quite a while to recover
And every time you cry I find I'm searching
For the rock I can crawl under
Oh, this could be any little town
There must be mountains crumbling somewhere
I could take you there
I'd hold you 'til we vanished in the thin air
It's crazy how I love you
This could be any little town, sane when she see me
This could be any little town, sane so she frees me
This could be any little town, sacred and easy
So I went runnin' up the street
Almost forgot that I had feet searching for something
Just peelin' out my crazy eyes
Feeling the full effect of lies left me with nothing
Oh, someone said to me today
Son, you'll run your life away dancin' and dreamin'
But I could hear beneath the haze
Of his hopeless, lifeless days his hart was screamin'
It's crazy how I've run through you

Yes, it's crazy how I've run through you
This could be any little town, sane when she see me
This could be any little town, sane so she frees me
This could be any little town, sacred and easy
So it might take a lot of time
I might be last in a long line of men to love you
Should I kick and twist and scream
Or could I just lay back and dream and think of summer
Oh, there'd be no one else around
Just you and I and the sound of us breathing together
Stuck in this crumbling little town
We'd be happy just to lie down there forever
It's crazy how I love you
Yes, it's crazy how I love you
How I love you, how I love you, yes it's true
This could be any little town, sane when she see me
This could be any little town, sane so she frees me
This could be any little town, sacred and easy
Oh, this could be any little town, sane when she see me
Oh, this could be any little town, sane so she frees me
