Do you remember yesterday? You made a promise for tomorrow
And I woke up alone and you were gone.
Things seem much more clear today, It didn't matter anyway
I woke up too late and found The knives were all missing
A note in the kitchen reads 'you never listen I've left the door locked and I'm gone'
Sentimental value is gone. It's over now. I went for a walk today
I thought I saw you standing, smiling So I just turned my back and wandered on.
It's easy to get angry, it's easier to drown the memory
But I'm too proud to think I might be wrong
There are pills on the nightstand for sleeping so I can push you away from my mind.
Sentimental value is gone. It's over now.
