I was standing at the edge of my mind trying hard to let some sunlight in I tied a kite to the idea of leaving life and stumbled out to where my brain had never been Then I saw her turn around and the words fell from my mouth

You're not the same you cut your hair and you changed your name and now I'm seeing straight on through you I'm afraid that you became everything I hate and now I know I never knew you
I never knew you

Blind and breathing hard from trying to climb up to the sky that lies outside your skin But step inside my mind I bet my soul you'll find that you're not the same as you have ever been You don't love the live you live you've got nothing left to give

You're not the same, you cut your hair and you changed your name and now I'm seeing straight on through you
I'm afraid that you became everything I hate and now I know I never knew you

And you don't know yourself
You sure know how to sell yourself as someone else
You're on your own now

You're not the same you're not the face in my picture frame and now I'm seeing straight on through you

I'm afraid that you became everything I hate and now I know I never knew you
You're not the same you cut your hair and you changed
your name and now I'm seeing straight on through you I'm afraid that you became everything I hate and now I
know I never knew you
I never knew you
