"The Vine"

girl you're clumsy as a first kiss I know and nothing like the motions of the waves and all of the pity for the dead you forgot sends a passion through my veins I've seen you slowly run your beauty like a vine but I'm the stone
I can't ever seem to let this go, it's all gone

I'm neck high in a river with concrete shoes tied I told you I'd find a way
I'm here to make sure we're alive

You looked so sad, I turned my head this will not pass
Memory tells me why you're here
I can't look back and although we're lonely in a world of endless arms let's try to say more careful things (when we are lost)

This means so much to me, by the way it's not enough God knows you're pretty and a killer when you speak (but I'm a rock) and I've watched you fade away I knew that you'd find your way all patterns leading back to me

You looked so good, and turned my head one more last stand
memory tells me why you're here
I can't look back
memory tells me why you're here
I can't look back
