In a small far room the bed is set With trinkets all surrounding Yet lone it rests, so dry it sets With souls aside abiding

There moves legs warm and close inside No, no leg braces a halo And pictures on walls where paint is lame Where sinks are friendly running

Reflect, reflect metal cast My toe has long been swollen My knees are blue, my eyes are too My love has not forgotten

Will come, will come, oh, he will come And make me have a baby Then I foresee we all, us three Will ride and all together

The hills have eyes, their trees have lives Disjointed like a hero No saga told, no things unfold To make the ride much finer

The length is fine, his hand in mine Does someone hear our chatter?
A lover's laugh, a bleeding calf
A dog out in the harbor
