Not the Same

She said,

"I was standing at the edge of my mind, trying hard to let some sunlight in.

I tied a kite to the idea of leaving life, and stumbled out to where my brain had never been."

Then I saw her turn around, and the words fell from my mouth -

"You're not the same.

You cut your hair, and you changed your name.

Now I'm seeing straight on through you.

I'm afraid that you became everything I hate.

Now I know I never knew you."

Blind, and breathing hard from trying to climb up to the sky

That lies outside her skin.

Step inside my mind, I bet my soul you'll find

You're not the same as you have ever been.

You don't love the life you live.

You've got nothing left to give.

You're not the same.

You cut your hair, and you changed your name.

Now I'm seeing straight on through you.

I'm afraid that you became everything I hate.

Now I know I never knew you.

You sold your soul to live.

You sold your soul.
