Step On Your Own

You were burning the day with a bag full of shake in your senses,
But you elevate.
Wearing the light like a tiger wears stripes,
Stepping through the shadows of my window pane.
You're ten kinds of wonderful, and you're beautiful,
and that's great.
But are you sure that you'll remember your name when the beautiful fades from your face?

Come on, take a step on your own.
I've carried you across a few worlds, it's time to be letting go.
Love is what comes when you're comfortable with being alone.
You're starting to show the soul in your bones.

You're tying up time with the big city lights, you're a bright mind.
Go on, show me it.
Living your life like the writers on strike;
Fighting for the right to put some soul in it.
You're ten kinds of possible,
It's not probable, but I'll wait.
Just to see if you'll remember your name when the probably fades from your fate.

Come on, take a step on your own.
I've carried you across a few worlds, it's time to be
letting go.
Love is what comes when you're comfortable with
being alone.
You're starting to show the soul in your bones.

It's only alright if you're living your life like you want to.
It's only alright if you step on your own like you need to.
It's only right to give yourself time, and you'll build yourself a beautiful life.
It's only alright.

But are you sure that you'll remember your name
When the beautiful fades from your face?
When the youth that you left is like a skin that you shed.
I'm screaming a series of sounds just to say-

Come on, take a step on your own.
I've carried you across a few worlds, it's time to be
letting go.
Love is what comes when you're comfortable with
being alone.
You're starting to show the soul in your bones.
