from "Michael Stanley", 1973, Tumbleweed Records

Watching outside as the rain out of Denver comes moving silently finding a pathway that runs through my mind and it fills all the cracks of my being and covers my thoughts wordlessly telling of places I've yet to find...

(CHORUS:)

Maybe it's back to the mountains
Back to my place in the hills Hoping that maybe she'll tell me Denver rain never will Leaving her world for a shelter of dreams, I elude her Looking through barriers of man-made tint, I still see All but needless to say she still finds me and calls to the child

I thought forgotten Touching my face with a kiss meant for no one but me...
