"Choices"

So many cities so alive in the distance shining So many roads beneath your feet stretched out and winding
So many people voices in the distance tell you where to turn
So many places unknown spaces all these lessons to learn

You will make these choices all alone
To find a life that you can call your own

So many songs to sing so many strangers that will pass you by
So many words inside your head will they ever come out right
So many expectations situations can you make it shine
So many memories your friends and enemies they live inside

To find a life that you can call your own

The path that you take
Can you live with your mistake
Can you rise from the ground
And see the world all around
And fly to the moon
And make your move

To find a life that you can call your own
You will make these choices
You will make these choices

You're high you're low do you know where to go
You're high you're low do you know where to go
