And so she woke up from a dream that was beautiful and starry and oh so wild it was all still clear in her eyes and though her mind was foggy and blank she wondered why her life couldn't be as lovely it was time there was this king he had a castle or throne but his horse was great and white he rode alone and liked it that way but when he met her he swore he would never leave her side they road across the land two lovers hand in hand and no danger would come near and when something made her cry she'd look at him teary eyed and he would make her feel better so much better so much better than before and now this forest was his home it was a night time and the right time for love in the dark she placed her hand upon her chest and all the rest just flowed makin' love down under an ancient far away night it was so grand just holding someone's hand and now safety came naturally it was so clear that she would never have to fear oh tell me a story of magic and spiralling ships and the stars in the night just whisper in my ears make it soft make it clear I want to hear every breath you say she placed her hand upon her breast but she woke up from the land tears falling in her hands as she looked up asking why she laid back in her bed thoughts rising in her head why can't my life be beautiful she said as she closed her eyes again just prayin' he'd return but only darkness fell upon her
