Graham Russell)

I'm not afraid of losing you or saying goodbye

If someone needs you more than me, I will understand why

I'd never stand between someone who's holding your heart

But I can't let a superstition tear us apart

Who has the right to speak fire from above

If heaven is away from you, that is the place I'll give up

For falling in love can't be taking these lips from the cup

CHORUS

Don't fill her mind with bread and blood

Don't confuse strength with pride and mud

I have a faith in love that's thicker than all bread and blood

I'm not afraid to face the truth of what I believe

If love was never meant to choose, it could never succeed

And we may always stand alone in everyone's sight

And be the judge unto ourselves between wrong and right

Who puts a price on eternity's sin

Who throws the first stone shall search for perfection again

For you are the reason that pleasure was taken from the pain

CHORUS

I won't see you cry, should it make you cry
