Me and the wind are celebrating your loss
Me and the wind are pulling kites and pushing trees
Me and the wind are celebrating your loss
Me and the wind are feeling freer than air should ever
be
Should ever be, should ever be, should ever

And when you lured me into your syrup
All I could think of was What a lovely way for me to go
I never really realized that Just like the struggling summer flies that I was drowning, no matter how sweet or how slow

Have I been such a fool
Have I been sitting on your stool
While you cracked the whip
While you cracked the whip

Me and the wind are celebrating your loss
Me and the wind are pulling kites and pushing trees
Me and the wind are celebrating your loss
Me and the wind are feeling freer than air should ever
Should ever be, should ever be, should ever

I danced imprisoned in your drumbeat
Your tune of spring had me whirling
Like a mad march, Merry hare
It never really came to mind that [Incomprehensible]
The strings of your instrument were strangling me
Inside their snare

Have I been such a fool
Have I been sitting on your stool
While you held the hoop
While you held the hoop

Now that I'm out and I'm shouting in doorways
Freed from a love more like murder
I should be singing but in liberation
Feel like a ship with no rudder

Me and the wind are celebrating your loss
Have I been such a fool

Me and the wind are celebrating your loss
Have I been such a fool

Me and the wind are celebrating your loss
Have I been such a fool

Me and the wind are celebrating your loss
Have I been such a fool
