Do you recognize me
here on this sleeper train and do you feel the pain Growing into the night, Mary and i can feel the taste of your birthday cake remember how it was to hold you into my arms, Mary.

It wasn't there
the summer lights around

i wasn't there
his hand upon my knees
And we're gone
across the sunny streets

And we're gone
the day you died, Mary and we go faster now together through the fields
here on this sleeper train and i can touch your face, Mary.

The precious things we've done hidden under my skin i let you sleep a while i let you sleep a while, Mary.

It was there
the summer lights around
i was there
and we're gone
across the sunny streets.
