There's dust on my shoes, but you don't have a clue.
The winds been blowing, pressuring me, but that's hardly news.

"What do I want?" Now there's a question.

"What do I need?" I can't answer that one.

So I'll put my head down, down in doubt,
don't have the voice to speak out.
Maybe you can help me, cause I can't help myself.
I hope you can help me, cause I only see you, no one else.

Then your hand reaches out to touch me.
That's when I fall to my feet.
Why are you so powerful compared to me?
Why don't I have the strength to get off my knees?

So I'll put my head down, down in doubt,
don't have the voice to speak out.
Maybe you can help me, cause I can't help myself.
I hope you can help me, cause I only see you, no one else.

Where are you? Where's my guide?
Where's that hand? Where's that light?
Where are you? Where's my light?
Where's that hand to be my guide?

So I'll put my head down, in doubt.
