We live today like there's no tomorrow
We sell our souls and
Our time is borrowed
We stole from heaven
Now there's hell to pay

So we better hope that there's something higher
We're getting old and we're none the wiser
We better hope that there's something higher
We're getting old and we're none the wiser
We're none the wiser

We fill our minds up
But our hearts are hollow
We hate the truth 'cause it's so hard to swallow
We're judged on what we do not what we say

So we better hope that there's something higher
We're getting old and we're none the wiser
We better hope that there's something higher
We're getting old and we're none the wiser
We're none the wiser

Tell me, how long must we ride this rollercoaster?
Tell me, how long 'til we're back on solid ground?
'Cause if we don't stop to look a little closer
We never see,
We never see what's going down
Before our eyes
Before our eyes
How much can we take?
Before we die
Before we die
How much can we break,
Can we break?

We better hope that there's something higher
We're getting old but we're none the wiser

What we don't know now we'll never know
What we don't show now we'll never show

What we don't know now we'll never know
What we don't show now we'll never show
What we don't know now we'll never know
What we don't show now we'll never show
What we don't know now we'll never know
What we don't show now we'll never show
