Underneath the sun there is a light.
Unveil your light, that I can move.
My heart's still in a crescent veil,
A wash of haze in a rushing night.

A silver-studded torn, and tattered gown,
she ruled the room with it - I just stared.
A warning roaring, miles above,
hanging over a warn-out night.

And the words we spoke were few,
We were feeling something strange.
I swear I thought you knew.
Then you said, "darling, how could you?"

Remember back when we first met?
It dont mean much.
All those things you said, you never meant.
It dont mean much.
How can I forgive, and just forget?
It dont mean much.
And all that time we spent, I swear we wasted.
It dont mean much.

And all at once, it's not important.
What fell in place just falls apart again, I guess.
Not happy, I can only hope.
It's only time, and you know i'll wait.

Because then it's like when we first met.
It dont mean much.
And all those things I said, I never meant.
It dont mean much.
But how can you forgive, and just forget?
It dont mean much.
And all that time we spent, we said we wasted.
