Come on! Woah! Come on!

I've told myself what I wanted to be
But the right way is always the wrong way for me
'Cause I want to stare, into the sun
Let my walls fall down, I'm coming undone

You float through life with no weight
Your passions collide with your fate
In your quiet room, I can hear
The sound of your breath, so clear

The laughter pierces my ears
I've wanted to know all of these years
Just a whisper knocking down walls
Speaking the truth, I've been waiting for you
I've been waiting for you

Like an architect's structure, a fine-tailored suit
In a one way direction, an army recruit
Smart, sweet, and kind how a good girl is raised
It eats at my mind, living lies for your praise

You float through life with no weight
Your passions collide with your fate
Like pictures tucked in a box
Your time exists without clocks

The laughter pierces my ears
I've wanted to know all of these years
Just a whisper knocking down walls
Speaking the truth, I've been waiting for you
I've been waiting for you

I'm waking up the girl
Taking up the world
Chasin' down the dream
Facing only me
Breaking down the walls
Hating just because
Call it all too fast

Call it your past
Making lots of sense to my friends
But when it ends
I'm living in my skin
Trying to feel okay
When did it begin?
Will it go away?
I know it tries
Can I be perfect in your eyes?

The laughter pierces my ears
I've wanted to know all of these years
Just a whisper knocking down walls
Speaking the truth, I've been waiting

The laughter pierces my ears (I've been waiting)
I've wanted to know all of these years
Just a whisper knocking down walls
Speaking the truth, I've been waiting for you
I've been waiting for you

Can I be perfect in your eyes?
So many lies

I've been waiting for you
