One time I crossed a clear, crystal river, when i came across something so beautiful, I could not help to hold my heart for fear it would pop right out.
I saw your eyes in this river, your diamonds sparkling across the bottom reflecting the radiance of the pale blue moon and the heavens along with it.

This song is about you
I don't have to say it
The chorus rests in your eyes
Your heart is a song
And forever I'll be singin'
drums beating for the rest of our lives

Suddenly a gorgeous gold flame caught my eye in the horizon.
It was your hair, the bright, wavy rays of the sun, and I, a mere mortal, to catch such beauty.

This song is about you
I don't have to say it
The chorus rests in your eyes
Your heart is a song
And forever I'll be singin'
drums beating for the rest of our lives

Singing: And then I saw it.
In the middle of a valley of tall, flowing, thin grass, a single deep red rose.
(4x)

Spoken (over singing): Amidst all of the things I had seen so far, this was the most alluring, the most angelic, the most exquisite thing yet.
It was your heart. Your lovely heart.
It was this that caught my attention, and since then I have never looked back.
Your pale-blue-moon lit eyes, your stunning rays of hair, and divine, elegant, wonderful heart all leave me here breathless and speechless, with no words left to say.

This song is about you
I don't have to say it
The chorus rests in your eyes
Your heart is a song
And forever I'll be singin'
drums beating for the rest of our lives

This song is about you
I don't have to say it
The chorus rests in your eyes
Your heart is a song
And forever I'll be singin'
drums beating for the rest of our lives
