My sheets are tangled around my legs inside my room I twist my angle to free my thoughts and lose this tune that's been tugging from that night I left my necktie in your room that's been humming in the air each night I lay awake
beneath the moon

A different battle
Every night a tangle war
My thoughts are shadows darkened by your light with more sleepless nights staring at the moon
The same light that once lit the hammock where we first kissed that June
beneath the moon

If you could feel the loss that has been blinding me
You wouldn't be so quick to make me lose my sleep
But you don't help me hold onto that night I lost my sight
beneath the moon

I bought a new necktie the first since I lost the last for good I made it a black tie This won't stain like the last one could

The moon is falling sun's coming up Another night I lost looking up I can't let go of your melting smile
I can't let go of my inner child
I lie
Awake I try
Too late to cry
Away you fly
