We use to dance in the morning,
as the light of day broke through the shades.
That's when the lovin' thoughts came callin',
the ones my mind just can't erase,
But now I snap, without a warnin',
sometime around the break of day.
That's when the memories come callin',
and when I look real hard I see your face.
chorus

We use to dance in the morning,
I'd hold you close and watch you wake.
Nothin' like a slow song to get you goin',
wish we could still just dance that way.
Now I stumble to my feet in the morning,
and I see those curtains drawn real tight.
That's when the tears they just start fallin',
and keep goin' right on thru the night.
Now, David danced before he fought Goliath,
and even now in quiet solitude,
I wrap my arms around your memory,
and waltz the night away with you...

Repeat chorus
