

Sleeping, The "Beautiful Gloom"

On my way down, I saw a different side of the moonlight.
You fell straight through the gloom, damaged,
haunting into open wounds.
Intimidated, too afraid to screw my head on straight and fly.
Words ricocheting, skimming both our bodies to a violent tune
But when I fell straight down I swear I witnessed a different side.

On my way down, straight down
I saw a different side of the moonlight.

Shocked, grim, speculating the worst before I hit the floor.
My bones fracture the fall; incessant waves seem to gush from your eyes.
I should feel exasperation but to my surprise I'm in a state of love.
Before the curtains closed, I swear I witnessed a
different side.
On my way down, straight down
I saw a different side of the moonlight.

I've been changing, sinking deep but wide awake for days.
I need you,
I've been changing, sinking deep, but wide awake for
days.
When's it gonna end?

On my way down, straight down
I saw a different side of the moonlight.
