last night with you was like waking up with my wrists open and last night with you was like waking up again and the tap water was anything but frigid you owe me more than i can count on these two hands the tap water was anything but frost bitten and you now owe me your very life so i'll scream to the station master "let these hearts pump a little faster" because we could all use something more and i'll scream to the station master and break his arms just a little faster cause all i ever wanted was to tell you that i worry and i'm not certain that i can make it through this week without you im not certain that i can take on this world with out you this could be your once in a life time come on and break me down
