eternity is pressed against my eyelids by brittle fists that i cannot avoid and though each finger's grip has been relentless the moments they just keep on slipping by and i am now aware that i am and always have been at this moment sadly sitting by the fire and blue waiting for you and though ive been expecting i have never quite accepted that the fire will suddenly go out the hands will fall away, the paint will peel the trees will sadly sway cause i'm scared that there's no answer cause i'm scared there's no truth in this life of mine there is only time the illusion of which is gone all my words are spread across the canvas no one seems to see the things i say and those these eyes were once those of an artist failure has relieved me of a face and i am now aware that i am only the brushstrokes on the headstone of a man that never lived and this, oh, this is his, a life that i have failed in and i hoped to be forgiven when the fire will suddenly go out

the hands will fall away, the paint will peel

so what is left waiting to be a man that i painted myself to be and just sadly sit with your eyes open and my eyes have uselessly [broken] we got a lot to say, got a lot to do boys are in the street they just want to do what they want we dont care how
