I'm alone now, sitting on my porch drinking coffee dreaming about my cigarettes

And it's not like I am dying
I just can't help that I'm crying
And I know I have to keep trying
But I can't see the light

I'm alone now, the voices from yesterday still ringing in my ears, doing nothing

I don't think I want to die
Although living is a lie
I just want to be touched

I know that your ghost will haunt me,
and I know memories will taunt me
And I knew it was gonna be hard
But I don't want to die alone
So touch me

I can taste you, still even though I know you've already moved on with your life
I can feel you, when I'm waking up alone crying out about the sheets I tore apart when you were gone

And it's not like I am dying
I just can't help that I'm crying
And I know I have to keep trying
But I can't see the light

I know that your ghost will haunt me,
and I know memories will taunt me
And I knew it was gonna be hard
But I don't want to die alone, I don't want to lie alone, I don't want to try alone
So touch me

So touch me-e, touch me-e You're my disgrace, you I can't erase I fill my lonely days trying to replace what you misplaced

All the tears been shed, what we left unsaid
All the scenes you fled, running in your head
In your head

So touch me, touch me
Not that far down yet, trying to forget Touch me
