There's a line, there's a dozen more Wrapping in a room, your country doors
There's a man, he's holding a pitcher of water Follow him into the house,

Every age has said, we will come, we'll come again
You will never get, up as close, as you expect
This house is a holy place, you don't ever have to leave
Every age has said, we will call, we'll come again

And when they say, (oh yes, they please don't keep on going on and on) [x4]
The biggest lie we tell ourselves
We're already in hell Blood shines upon us, it maces and covers.

There's a man that pours,
Throughout the floor and door,
There's a light and there's a dozen more Nothing in the country doors.

(This is the last time this will happen)
You are will get, up as close, as you expect
This house is a holy place, you don't ever have to leave
(This is the last time this will happen)

We are taught to think of our success in terms of numbers
If touching one persons life is a good thing, then touching one thousands people lives must be a great thing,
It's easy to see where we learned to think this way
Our whole society revolves around mass production
The more units we can move
The more customers we can serve
The more boats we can get The more money and the more stuff we have, the better, right?

Maybe it's not possible to touch one thousand peoples thinking,
or as powerfully as one person.
Maybe it's not really so revolutionary after all,
to have one person out of a group of twenty, tell everybody else what's right.
Wouldn't it be better if we tried a decentralized approach
where everyone works closely with those around them, instead of a few people waiting in anonymous mass?
Do you have to save the world all by yourself, why don't you trust someone else to do it with you?
